

Secto Design illuminates Architect@Work as lighting partner

Finnish lighting company Secto Design has been selected as the official lighting partner for three editions of Architect@Work, the curated trade fair tailored for architects, interior designers and specifiers across Europe.

As part of this role, Secto Design luminaires will illuminate the bar area of the exhibitions in Munich, Vienna and Berlin, creating a prominent lighting installation in the central space where visitors gather during the event.

In addition to the lighting installation, the company will present two recent additions to its collection, both selected by the Architect@Work jury for the fair's curated exhibition of innovative architectural products, with a strong emphasis on sustainability and transformation.

New lighting designs: Kumulo and Adilo pendant lamps

Designed by architect Seppo Koho, the Kumulo pendant lamp introduces a softer, more voluminous expression to the Secto Design collection. Its cloud-like form is created from precisely shaped birch slats, forming an open, layered structure that filters light evenly. The generous scale is paired with a visually light appearance, casting a warm, diffused glow and maintaining a calm, characteristic presence suited to hospitality, workplace and public interiors.

The Adilo pendant lamp, designed by industrial designer and wood artisan Ilkka Kauppinen, explores a fold-out structure in wooden lighting. Made from ultra-thin birch plywood, the luminaire is shipped flat and expands during installation into a spherical, layered form. The design combines minimal material use with a strong spatial presence, offering both logistical efficiency and a new structural approach within the collection.

Both luminaires are handmade in Finland from PEFC-certified Finnish birch by highly skilled craftspeople at the company's own production facility.
